Learn French

at the heart of Europe in the city of lights at the university Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne!

Located in the heart of the Latin Quarter, the University Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne is proud of its glorious past with its first college founded in 13th century by Robert de Sorbon. Since 1970 the university has been focusing its training and research mission around three major scientific poles: human sciences and arts, law and political science, economics and management.

Established on 25 sites in Paris and the Ile-de-France region, the university accompanies more than 45.000 students per year in a civic and humanist approach. At the heart of a network of international relations covering five continents, the university plays a major role in the training of researchers, professors, magistrates, lawyers, companies' executives and administration. The university motto is:

Omnibus sapientia, unicuique excellentia

– Knowledge for all, excellence for everyone.

With its 800 years of history and 50 years of excellence, the university Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne is today the largest university of humanities and social sciences in France.
